A. Higher Education Act Reauthorization and Clery Act Updates

Lisa Philips, Director of Government and External Affairs

Dolores Stafford, member of Department of Education HEA negotiated rule making committee
Convention Center – 202

You will learn about the changes in the Clery Act enacted through the Higher Education Act (HEA) reauthorization signed into law. While the main categories of reporting under Clery remain the same, four new categories have been added under Hate Crime Reporting: larceny, simple assault, destruction of property and vandalism, and intimidation. Specific definitions will be determined through a negotiated rulemaking process. Since there is no UCR definition of intimidation, incidents that appear aimed at specific categories of students and staff will be developed and available for review at the IACLEA Conference. You will also learn about requirements in the new law to maintain a daily log to note fire incidents which result in personal or property damage. To be negotiated is the definition of both property and damage. Also included are new missing student protocols. Finally, you will receive an update on the negotiations over the thorniest issue of the Act, specific guidance on what is an emergency incident and how institutions should respond in a timely manner.

B. Crowd Management Quebec City: Lessons Learned

Jean-Pierre Verville

Inspector, Quebec City Police Department
Convention Center - 203

For over 90 years, Quebec City has been the host to many events and gatherings: the conscription's riot in 1918, the Queen's visit riot in 1964, the Quebec's Summit of the Americas in 2001, and the recent Quebec's St-Jean riot. The presence of the provincial Parliament in Quebec also brings hundreds of violent and non-violent gatherings each year. But how, between mass meetings, gatherings and riots, did the Quebec City Police Department learn how to manage, control and predict the unpredictable? Over the last century, they learned many valuable lessons in planning, preparing and implementing comprehensive crowd management. As a consequence of experience, studies and training, their procedures are now considered to be a benchmark in the field.

The 2008 visits of Sir Paul McCartney and of Celine Dion, both events attracting over 200,000 people, have indeed proved very important lessons have been learned.

- 9:00 a.m.–10:30 a.m. General Session: Campus Safety Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow
Michael Dorn, Executive Director, Safe Havens, Inc.
Hilton - Ballroom

This dynamic, fast paced and informative session will help to dispel many campus public safety myths that dominate the media and popular perceptions among staff, students, and parents. You will hear a brief historical overview of major campus safety incidents, followed by tangible and practical real world action steps to make our campuses safer. Michael Dorn will cover the most critical issues related to higher education weapons assault prevention, three-dimensional emergency preparedness, antiterrorism concerns and where campus safety is headed in the future. During his 25-year public safety career, Michael Dorn has served as a university police officer, corporal, sergeant, lieutenant and school district police chief. He was appointed as School Safety Specialist for the State of Georgia and also as Lead Program Manager in the Terrorism Division of the State of Georgia Office of Homeland Security.

Workshops

A. Legal Update

Oren Griffin, Assistant Professor of Law, Mercer Law School, Macon, Georgia

John Marshall, Associate University Counsel, Kennesaw State University, Kennesaw, Georgia

Convention Center -204AB

The safety of student, faculty, and staff at colleges and universities has become a paramount concern for decision-makers at practically every level of the institution and among other important stakeholders such as parents, legislators and the community at-large. This presentation will explore recent state and federal statutes related to campus safety and security. Also, the session will examine recent court decisions that impact the challenges confronted by campus safety officers and administrators. Finally, the session will offer updated lessons learned in light of recent on-campus tragedies and identify legal concerns that college and university law enforcement personnel should recognize and understand.

B. Chiefs Panel on Accreditation

John Leonard, IACLEA Director of Accreditation & LEMAP Programs

Convention Center – 205 AB

This workshop will review the history of IACLEA's accreditation efforts and provide an overview of the features, requirements and benefits of the Accreditation Program. Intended to outline the critical steps to achieving accreditation, it will identify and explain the principal duties of an Accreditation Manager, including preparing a self-assessment plan, writing effective directives, organizing accreditation files, and preparing for an on-site assessment.

C. Don't Be That Guy, Don't Be That Girl
Rosemary Briscoe, Special Constable,
University of Windsor, Campus Community Police

Convention Center - 203

Learn about an innovative alcohol and drug abuse awareness, education, and enforcement program created by the University of Windsor. In developing this program the university wanted to be pro-active, combining all university departments and the community to address all aspects of alcohol and drug use on campus, not just awareness. A model was designed based on the best practices from other institutions that fit the needs of the university's students. "Don't Be That Guy, Don't Be That Girl," is a comprehensive alcohol and other drug prevention collaborative program between numerous departments at the University of Windsor (including Campus Community Police, Residence Life, Health Services, Educational Development, students) and local community substance abuse prevention organizations, such as the Teen Health Centre and the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health. The program's objective is to reduce alcohol and drug related problems on campus through three key areas: education/awareness, intervention/treatment, and policy/enforcement. The program emphasizes a balance between a student's academic and social lives. You will gain insights into this innovative program to reduce alcohol and drug abuse through awareness and prevention strategies.

D. A Model for Campus Emergency Management
Glenn Phyper, Challenging Risk, Inc.
 Convention Center – 202

A consultant's research indicates that many institutions are insufficiently prepared to deal with emergencies and disasters, due to several factors. These factors include reliance on official written plans instead of institution-wide synergistic planning, an event-driven perspective that narrows the scope of anticipation to a specific hazard, and a disconnection between the theoretical and practical spheres of campus emergency managers and planning teams. This presentation demonstrates how these identified problems have affected emergency preparedness in the prevention, mitigation, response, recovery and continuity phases. The presentation will feature a model that provides insight into the complexities of emergency management and enables a focused discussion on the issues and essential elements required for the application of appropriate emergency management concepts and processes.

3:00 p.m. – 3:30 p.m. Refreshment Break

B. Active Shooters and Campus Violence: The Canadian Framework and Realities

Francois Page

Convention Center - 202

Canada is no stranger to college and university campus violence. Over three decades, it has experienced its share of tragic events. The speaker will invoke these major events and the lessons dearly learned, will explain and draw the parallels between the phenomenon's evolution and that of the Canadian judicial framework, while describing the major differences between Canadian and American legislation. He will also expand upon the reach of coroner's report following the Dawson College event and will put in perspective the greater questions and challenges for Canadian campus security services over the next decade.

C. Michael Dorn, Executive Director, Safe Havens, Inc.
When Young Lives are at Stake – Practical Campus Emergency Operations Planning

Convention Center - 203

This interactive session will draw on participant's experiences as well as the instructor's knowledge to help improve participant's existing plans. This information-packed session will examine the key role of education, public safety and emergency management personnel before as well as during major incidents. This presentation will outline the concepts to turn paper plans into three dimensional plans that will work under the stress and chaos of actual crisis events.

D. Industry Challenge Round Table

Convention Center -205AB

This round-table discussion will focus on current issues surrounding CCTV systems. It will cover various areas of interest to campus law enforcement administrators, including IP v. Analog, Fixed v. PTZ, Color v. Black & White, CCTV Network Design Considerations, Video Management Systems (Recording and Storage), Intelligent Video (Smart CCTV) and Wireless Video and more.

Workshops

A. The Future of Campus Law Enforcement
Paul Ominsky, Director of Public Safety,
Mount Holyoke College
Elizabeth Cohn, Planning and Community
Outreach Coordinator, Mount Holyoke
College

Hilton – Beauport/Beaumont/Belair Room

What will campus security look like in ten years? In twenty years? Recent events have focused attention on crisis planning and timely response to incidents of gun violence. As serious as these incidents are, they are rare. Campus law enforcement administrators need to think about security from every angle and utilize multiple strategies to improve effectiveness of our operations within the many changes taking place in higher education—financial constraints, increased risk of litigation, a stricter regulatory environment, higher expectations of service, challenges in hiring, and ever-increasing diversity among the individuals and communities that we serve. This presentation will focus on four areas that hold promise for long-term change in campus law enforcement: shared management and regionalization, department accreditation, improved recruitment, training, and mentoring, and effective use of civilian community outreach. The presenters will wrap up the program with a discussion of how current challenges in our field can serve to create opportunities to rethink the role of our departments in the larger campus context. Participants will leave with new perspectives on how to work effectively within the broader educational environment and new inspiration to think creatively about opportunities on their own campuses.

B. Forging a Relationship with your International Student Department
Ralph Avery, Staff Sergeant, Public Safety
Division, Northeastern University
Hilton – Porte du Palais Room

Based on a successful in-service training program sponsored by the Northeastern University Public Safety Division and follow-up activities, this program will explore strategies for more effective outreach to international students. The Division sponsored a two-hour block of instruction entitled "Interacting with International Students." Associate Dean Scott Quint, the Director of the University "International Student and Scholar Institute" (ISSI) and some of his staff and some international students, presented a panel discussion in each of the six sessions during the training program. The goal was to have officers better understand the backgrounds of some of our international students, learn about their experiences with their home country police, and appreciate how those backgrounds and experiences might impact the interactions these students might have with the officers. Officials distributed a handout with sample problems that international students face during their time at Northeastern, and some of the problems and issues were discussed. The program helped some of the student panelists and ISSI staff members learn more about the Public Safety Division and its services. As an outgrowth, the Division has lengthened and improved its participation in the "New International Student Orientation" program and begun a more formalized and proactive effort to meet all international students and to assist them in a variety of ways. The Division's experience can help your department to further develop strategies and programs to enhance relations and outreach to international students.

C. Homeland Security Overview-Recent Updates in Critical Incident Management
Training and Federal Policies

Christopher G. Blake, CAE, IACLEA
Campus Preparedness Project Director
Toni Rinaldi, member, IACLEA Domestic Preparedness Committee and Critical
Incident Management Instructor
Hilton – Porte Saint Louis Room

Learn about the next phase in IACLEA's popular critical incident management training program. This all-hazards course provides practical, hands-on training to prepare command-level emergency responders to deal with any type of incident, from a terrorist attack to a weather-related event. Funded by a U.S. Department of Homeland Security grant, this program has resulted in the training of more than 2,500 campus and non-campus emergency responders over the last three years. Learn about recent course curriculum changes that have integrated new federal training protocols and procedures into the course. The three-day course presents all phases of critical incident management, as well as the concepts embodied in the National Incident Management System (NIMS) and the Incident Command System (ICS). It also features a realistic tabletop exercise using a model campus simulator. This program will also feature an overview of recent federal policies requiring incident command training for senior higher education administrators.

D. The FBI and Campus Public Safety:
Keeping our Campuses and Nation Safe
Moderator: Jeff Allison, Special Adviser on Campus Public Safety, FBI Office of Law Enforcement Coordination

National Joint Terrorism Task Force
(NJTTF) Campus Liaison Initiative
Jennifer Gant
Supervisory Special Agent

Law Enforcement Online (LEO)
Ron Benson
Supervisor

FBI Academic Alliance Unit
Mark Levett
Unit Chief

Civil Rights Division
Jeff Allison for Cynthia Deitle
Unit Chief

Hilton – Porte/Kent Room

Given current and emerging public safety challenges facing our campuses and nation, it is essential that the partnership between the FBI and campus public safety agencies continues to thrive. The relationship is built upon trust and a mutual respect that fosters effective information-sharing and operational support. Workshop participants will have an opportunity to discuss the various ways the FBI and campus public safety agencies interface in support of one another's critical missions.
