MOTOROLA FOUNDATION SUPPORTS SCHOLARSHIPS TO ATTEND IACLEA EXECUTIVE DEVELOPMENT INSTITUTE

WEST HARTFORD, CT (April 30, 2010) – The International Association of Campus Law Enforcement Administrators Inc. (IACLEA) is pleased to announce it will award scholarships to allow eligible minority group members to attend the annual Executive Development Institute (EDI) for the next three years, thanks to a generous grant from the Motorola Foundation.

“We thank the Motorola Foundation for its support for diversity in campus public safety,” said IACLEA President Marlon C. Lynch, who is Associate Vice President and Chief of Police at the University of Chicago. “Our student population on campuses is becoming increasingly diverse and it’s important that our campus safety leadership also reflects that diversity.”

The Executive Development Institute is an intensive three-day program to train current and newly appointed executives on law enforcement leadership and management topics pertaining to a campus environment. The target audience is managers with the following titles: chief of police, director of public safety, director of security, and command personnel such as captain or assistant director being considered for promotion. The majority of law enforcement training resources and organizational attention is primarily directed to recruits, and then to supervisory, specialty and in-service training. For campus law enforcement executives, there are few, if any, programs tailored to address the demands of a campus environment. This program addresses that need.

“The Motorola Foundation is committed to supporting the training and development of campus law enforcement executives,” said Eileen Sweeney, director of the Motorola Foundation. “Campus safety is critical to providing an environment that our future leaders can learn and gain the knowledge they strive for every day.”

This year’s EDI will take place July 25-28, 2010 at the Northwestern University Center for Public Safety in Evanston, IL. Formerly the Traffic Institute, the Center for Public Safety builds on the Traffic Institute’s tradition of excellence by expanding the scope of education to include a comprehensive offering of crash investigation, police operations and management, and transportation engineering courses. Law enforcement agencies have also come to depend on the Center for university-level research programs, technical assistance, and conferences on issues such as DUI. This is the first year of a partnership with the Center for Public Safety at Northwestern.
